Trough deformities can be challenging to treat with dermal fillers but with proper injection technique and appropriate choice of fillers physicians can master the rejuvenation of this delicate region, silicone injections may result in complications that bring patients to a dermatologist or plastic surgeon. These complications may be due to the use of nonmedical grade products, large volume injections, incorrect placement of the product, or a combination of the above. Frequent complications, dermal fillers, these injectables help contour deep folds, furrows, and depressed scars. They can improve and reduce creases in the skin. The dermal filler may also be used to add volume, enhance your lips, contour, and lift your cheeks.

Series title: Series in Cosmetic and Laser Therapy
Responsibility: David J. Goldberg
Background: Hyaluronic acid (HA) fillers are becoming the material of choice for use in cosmetic soft tissue and dermal correction. HA fillers appear to be similar, but their physical characteristics can be quite different. These differences have the potential to affect the ability of the physician to provide the patient with a natural and enduring result.

David J. Goldberg, MD, JD, is recognized nationally and internationally for his innovative work with skin lasers, cosmetic dermatology, and facial rejuvenation techniques. A board-certified dermatologist who has been in practice since 1985, he has treated patients and taught doctors throughout the world in the use of these cutting edge technologies.

Dr. Goldberg of Skin Laser & Surgery Specialists of New York and New Jersey is the world renowned authority on skin laser technology and cosmetic dermatology. At his New Jersey and New York cosmetic dermatology offices, Dr. Goldberg offers a host of procedures for rejuvenating and enhancing the face and body.

Dermal fillers for periocular rejuvenation hyaluronic acid (HA) was first pioneered for use in humans in the late 1970s by ophthalmologists for anterior segment surgery. Biocompatibility for orthopedic and dermal applications was explored in the early 1990s. At this time, no dermal filler is approved by the US Food and Drug Administration for use in the periorbital area. David J. Goldberg, MD, dermatologist in NJ and NY, is recognized nationally and internationally for his innovative work with skin lasers, cosmetic dermatology, and non-invasive facial and body rejuvenation techniques. Background injection of dermal fillers is one of the most commonly performed procedures in the cosmetic dermatology practice as its usage is expanding. The possibility of complications will likely increase. The objective of this review is to summarize the complications associated with hyaluronic acid injections and to provide a guide to avoiding them and managing these complications if they do occur.
